The Good Design Company
Your Render Blueprint

To create an accurate rendering of your design, here's what I'll need to get started. Don't worry if everything isn't perfectly organized—I'll let you know if anything is missing. If certain information isn't available, we can work together to make the space look as accurate as possible with the info we have.

Category	Project Information
Room Information	Measured or to scale floor plan Ceiling height Door heights Window height & sill height Door and window locations and widths unless otherwise specified Lighting locations Specifications for soffits, beams and / or other ceiling details
Existing Space, if applicable	Clear photos of the room, preferably one from each corner Photos of architectural details that will remain
Design Selections	Mood boards, elevations, and design notes Links, manufacturer's information or clear images for paint, flooring, tile, wallcoverings, wood, upholstery, metal and other finishes (direct links are preferred) Cabinetry and millwork elevations, if available Tile layouts and installation direction, where applicable
Furnishings & Décor	Links to all new furniture, lighting, artwork, and accessories Photos and dimensions for any items without a product link Photos and dimensions of any existing furniture, lighting, artwork, or décor that will remain Specific finish, fabric or colorway for each selected item

Every project is a little different, so I may reach out for a few additional details as the rendering comes together.
